NEST-GA 2003 Anthropology of State & Government in The Middle East

This class questions what an anthropology of the modern middle eastern nation state would look like, taking into account the historical, political and economic forms that produced the middle eastern nation state as it has been, as it is, and what it is in the process of becoming. Particular emphasis will be placed on different practices of citizenship within these nation state forms.